Brian and Simon stood by a bus stop. They were on their way home from school. Brian asked, "Are you going to watch the England match on TV tonight?"
Simon replied, "Of course."

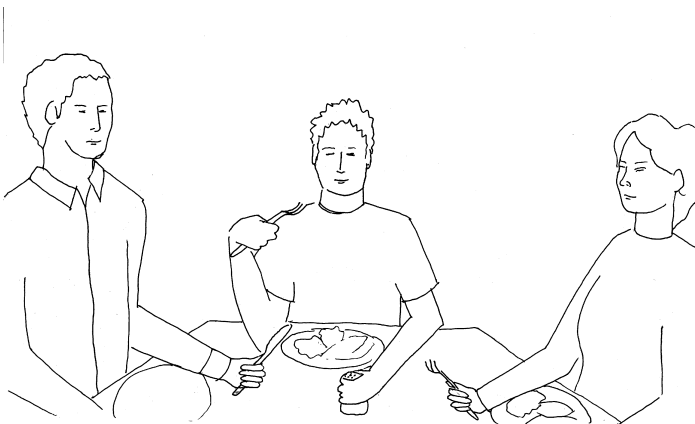

The bus came and they both got on. They continued to talk about the match. Simon had to get off. They both said, "See you! And hope England wins!"

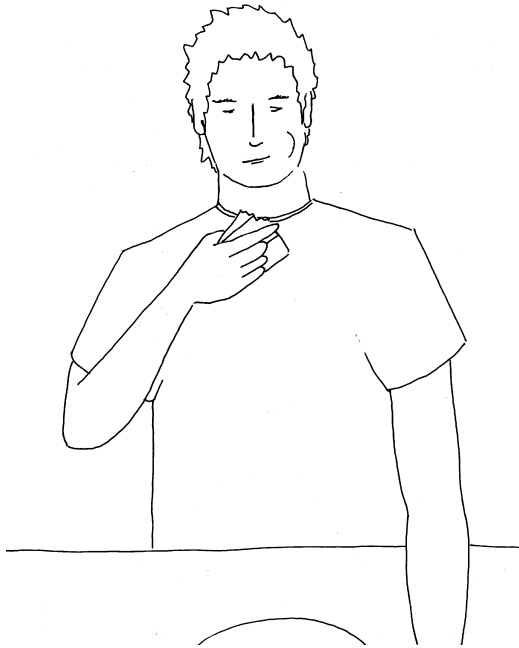

Simon was having his tea with Mum and Dad. Simon asked his Dad, "Are you watching the match tonight?"

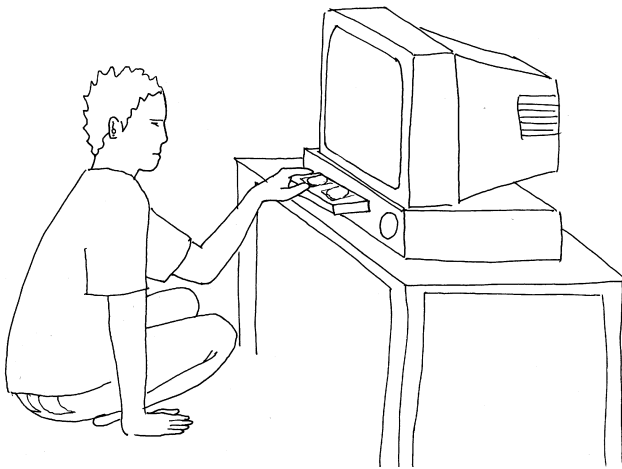

Dad shook his head, "No, I can't because I have to go to a Neighbourhood Watch meeting after tea."

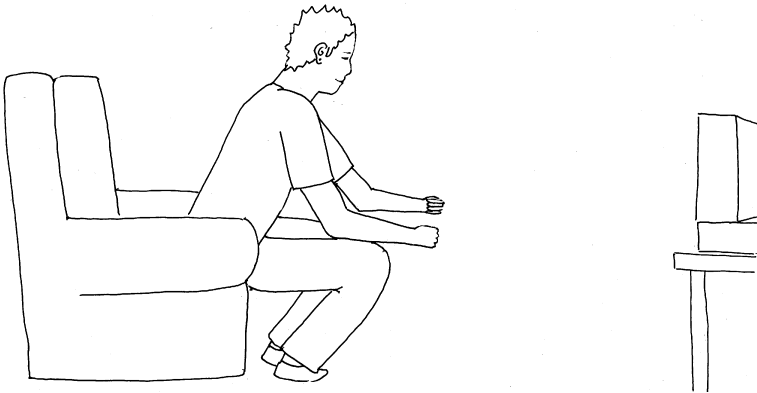

Dad asked, "But please record the match on tape for me. So when I come back from the meeting, I can watch it." Simon munched his cake and nodded his head.

Dad went to the Neighbourhood Watch meeting. Simon was on his own and he remembered Dad asking him about the match. He knelt before the television and put a video tape in the video recorder. He pressed the record button.

Simon sat down and the match started. He was excited throughout the match and he was always on the edge of the chair. He rubbed his hands and shouted when England attacked.

England scored and Simon jumped up and down. He was so pleased. He sat back. He failed to see the tape coming out. The tape was full and Simon did not rewind.

England won. His mobile rang and it was Brian. Simon said, "Wasn't England great?"

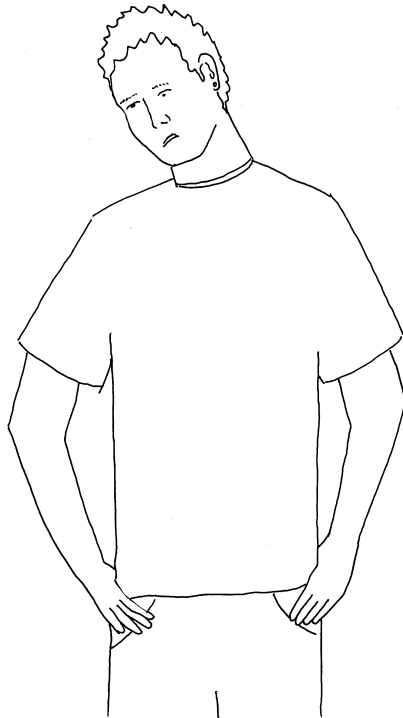

Brian replied, "Yes, two good goals." It was then Simon noticed the video. "Oh, no!" remarked Simon.

"Hang on," said Simon as he reached for the video. He checked and it was full! He realised that he didn't rewind before he recorded the match. "I have a problem with the tape. I will ring you back," said Simon. He switched the mobile off.

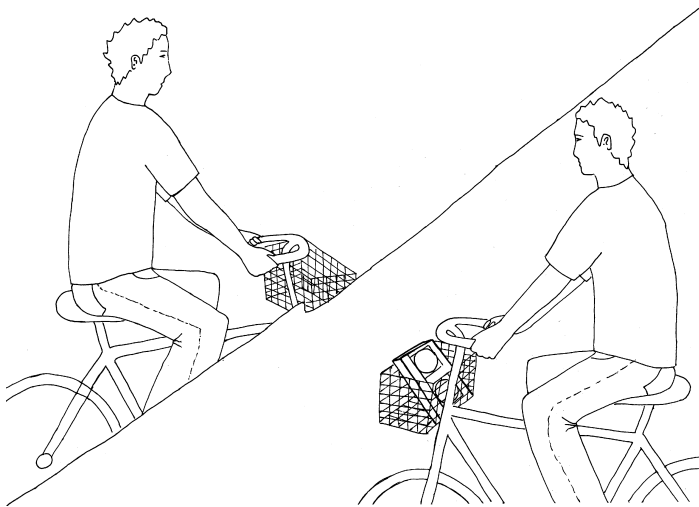

Simon checked the video to see how much has been taped. He found out that he had only taped 5 minutes of the match. He shook his head with his hands on his hips.

Simon knew there was nothing he could do. He rang Brian anyway and told him what happened. Brian said, "You are in luck because I am also recording the match and the tape is ok. We really don't need it."

Simon was relieved and he agreed to ride over to Brian's house to collect the tape. He went on his bike. He managed to get the tape before his Dad came home.
